We were at the Museum of Vancouver and asked for a recommendation for lunch. A few blocks away was a neighborhood jewel. We had the lamb sandwich and the vegetable sandwich with mozzarella plus Italian sodas.

They also have an intriguing menu of breakfast dishes and a coffee bar. Really good food in a pleasant, pine-paneled setting reminiscent of European bistros. Wish we could go again. read more. What Patricia Koelpin doesn't like about

Juliet's Cafe:

We had a very expensive breakfast here, and would say it was decent but not exceptional. The muffin I got was very good, but when I asked to have it grilled, was told "we only microwave here My husband described his egg breakfast as just...okay. The orange juice was freshly squeezed, but not worth We would not return. read more.
