A popular cafe in Halifax received mixed reviews for its food offerings, particularly the croissants. While some raved about the pastries, others found them underwhelming and not authentic. The coffee, on the other hand, was consistently praised for being delicious. The cafe's ambiance was described as cute, with a good amount of seating and nice merchandise available for purchase. Despite some complaints about limited seating and parking, the cafe was generally enjoyed by customers for its coffee and pastries. Overall, the consensus was to go for the coffee and skip the food unless you're in the mood for a loaf of bread.
